The Georgia Restaurant Association (GRA) estimated in 2018 that earlier Sunday sales could generate an average of $25,000 in additional yearly revenue for participating restaurants.

In 2018, the Georgia Restaurant Association (GRA) estimated that allowing earlier Sunday alcohol sales could generate an average of $25,000 in additional annual revenue for participating restaurants. The change in the law, known as the "Brunch Bill," allowed communities to approve the earlier sales through a local referendum.

More details on the 2018 Brunch Bill and revenue projections:

- Legislation: Senate Bill 17, which contained the earlier Sunday sales provision, passed in the Georgia General Assembly in early 2018 and was signed into law by Governor Nathan Deal.
- Earlier sales: The bill allowed restaurants and bars to begin on-premise alcohol sales at 11 a.m. on Sundays, instead of the previous 12:30 p.m. start time.
- Revenue estimates:
 - The GRA estimated an average of $25,000 in additional yearly revenue for participating restaurants.
 - A state representative estimated that the change would generate an additional $11 million in state and local tax revenue.
